

Health and safety administrator Siobhan, 40, of South London – who is partially disabled – told us: “To think I once told him I would trust him with my life. Now I don’t believe a word he says.”

“In 13 years, the mask never slipped once. I had no idea he was effectively married with children and a family home just a few miles away from where we would meet.”

“I had often hoped that, one day, Wayne and I would maybe get married. But he always put his job first. Or so he always said.”

“His job and all the travel helped him keep Lorraine and the children a secret from me – and me a secret from them.”

“I fell for all his lies hook, line and sinker. I have been a fool. I never want to see him or speak to him again.”

“I would never even have looked at him if I’d known about Lorraine.”

Tipsy

Siobhan revealed: “One of the last times I saw Wayne was in August last year. I was a bit tipsy and I rang him up. He was at a very posh London hotel, minding Anastacia.”

“He asked me to come over and we spent the night together.”

“Yes, it was wonderful because it was a beautiful hotel and Wayne is very charming.”

“But, by then, I’d realised that Wayne would never commit to me.”

“I would advise Anastacia to take her time with him. She doesn’t need any heartache.”

Siobhan only found out the truth last month when Lorraine revealed Wayne had left their home in Kent to live with Anastacia in America.

Siobhan has now become friends with Lorraine – who told us: “I realise Wayne is totally out for himself. He has a seen a chance of the high life and he has gone for it.”

“If I was thinking of marrying a man I would find a past like his a bit of a problem.”

“I hope Anastacia thinks long and hard before marrying him.”

Police on to a loo-ser

A MOVE to get police to pour gallons of alcohol down the toilet has been blasted.

Officers are working a relay of shifts to flush away the haul, which includes champagne, 2,500 cans of beer and hundreds of bottles of wine.

A judge ordered police in Hanley, Staffs, to get rid of the alcohol after it was seized from an off licence which was trading illegally.

Waste

Severn Trent banned officers from throwing the booze down the drain, so PCs will spend the next week on toilet duty.

Sergeant David Wright said: “We are going to have to open every single can and bottle and tip them down the toilet. We will be staggering it over a two or three-day period.”

But Kevin Waters, former secretary of the Police Federation, said it was a waste of taxpayers’ money.

He said: “I find it incredulous to think this is going to be taking place within our force when it is paid for by the people of Staffordshire.”

Drug romp Bruno's final chance

SEX PARTY: Former champ Frank

BOXING legend Frank Bruno is to give himself a Sporting Chance to knock out his demons, by checking into an addiction clinic.

The ex-world heavyweight champ had a cocaine-fuelled romp with a hooker, it was revealed yesterday.

Hooker

At a party at his £1million pad in Bedfordshire, big Frank, 44, is said to have romped with the girl and snorted a staggering 14 lines of the drug.

Yesterday he vowed it was "a one-off" and promised he will "never touch the filthy stuff again". His agent David Davies added: "Frank has said that he is very sorry that this has happened. He has apologised to his family and he would also like to apologise to his friends and fans. "This will not happen again."

A close pal said the troubled dad-of-four aims to prove it - by spending time at the Sporting Chance clinic in Hampshire, run by ex-England football star Tony Adams.

The friend said: "Frank wants people to know it was a one-off mistake."

SEND

THE chill calm of the autumn air is suddenly shattered by the sound of barking dogs.

From DOMINIK LEMANSKI in Sangatte

The smell of tear gas stings the nostrils as shadowy figures burst into makeshift homes in woodland that the terrified occupants now call The Jungle.

The target is the thousands of asylum seekers now living around the French port of Calais.

And a Daily Star Sunday investigation has discovered that the purpose of these nightly attacks is to force the immigrants to flee - straight to Britain.

Charity workers and asylum seekers in the area told us that the new policy was introduced by headline French Interior Minister Nicolas Sarkozy. One terrified asylum seeker told us: "They come at night to tell us to 'Fk off to England'."

"They don't want us here and are determined to make us go over the Channel."

In the latest crackdown an empty warehouse in central Calais - a makeshift home to more than 70 asylum seekers - was bulldozed after dark.

Hide

The immigrants, from war-ravaged Afghanistan and East African trouble spots Sudan, Eritrea, Somalia and Ethiopia, now hide in the sprawling forest.

Last week I ventured into The Jungle - a patch of land yards from the ferry terminal which offers them a last hope of a new life in the UK.

Hadi Razie, a 17-year-old student from Afghanistan, told us he is only heading for Britain because he feels like a hunted man in France.

He said: "There are no human rights in France - they do not want us here. "The charities hand out food twice a day - a lunch and dinner of bread and cheese or pasta."

"The police are always raiding The Jungle and anywhere else we sleep."

"They come with torches and dogs and sometimes tear gas during the day and night."

"My friend Mohammed Raza still has the bite marks on his

'EM TO BRITAIN

LAST CHANCE: Immigrants gather to try to hitch an illegal ride to Britain, living on a diet of bread and cheese, right leg where he was attacked by one of the police dogs.

"They destroy our camps, arrest and fingerprint us and send us to a deportation centre in Paris but refuse to give us papers or anywhere to live. They release us and tell us to leave their country but we always come back here, to Calais.

Sneak

"There is nothing for us in France. We live for the day when we can sneak on to a lorry and make it to the UK - in the UK they are nice to refugees."

Local teacher and charity volunteer Veronique Boutin, 36, is disgusted by the French Government's policy of pushing the asylum problem on to the UK and told us: "Today I am here working as a volunteer for the Association La Belle Etoile.

"Charities are the only ones helping. The French Government does not care.

"On October 24 police demolished a hangar known as The White House - where more than 70 asylum seekers lived. They said it was dirty and unfit to live in - so they pulled it down. Now these people have to sleep on the streets in freezing temperatures.

"I cannot believe they destroyed this squat - it is only a matter of time before someone dies sleeping rough.

"There are more than 500 people queuing for food.

"Nothing has changed since Sarkozy closed Sangatte camp four years ago. I think now, if he is elected President, things will get even worse.

"He has said we cannot have all the world's misery in France.

"The police have told me they want these people to go to England.

"There is no solution to this situation. It is awful."

Gaafar Gibrel, a 27-year-old Sudanese farmer, said: "I want to go to England as the Government here is after me. I sleep under a bridge every night and have no money or possessions.

"The police pick us up and take us to their station. They give us papers and tell us to go to England."

Rough

Eyobe Kikidoone and his girlfriend Feven Kifle, both aged just 16, are also living rough while they wait to travel the last part of their journey from Eritrea to Britain.

Eyobe said: "When we try to sleep the police come after us. England is a good country. They have respect for refugees. But the French give us only bread. We can see they do not want us here.

"We just want to get to England where there is economy and education."

In the UK they are nice to refugees

BOND-ING: Hunky Dan's a gay dream

Bond-age a licence to thrill...

by DOMINIK LEMANSKI

THE new James Bond is set to shake AND stir gay cinema goers. Having being treated to a sneak preview, we can reveal that 007's latest big screen adventure, Casino Royale, is a thrill-a-minute epic for gay fans.

And Daniel Craig, 38, who bares his hunky torso on a string of occasions in the movie, has even been praised by gay rights chiefs for showing Bond's "homo-erotic side".

As well as stripping off whenever he gets the chance, Bond also endures a kinky torture scene where he is whipped on his privates with a knotted rope by baddie Le Chiffre while sitting naked on a bottomless chair.

Cocky

As Le Chiffre, played by Mads Mikkelsen, 40, prepares to crank up the rope-whipping torture, Bond starts to get cocky.

He refuses to hand over a valuable password, taunting his captor with the line: "Can you do it on the right side, I have got a bit of an itch."

When asked why he is enjoying his punishment so much, Bond answers: "Because you are going to die scratching my balls."

Bond girls Eva Green, 26, Caterina Murino, 32, and Ivana Milicevic, 32, take a back seat in the flick while gay fans are taken into "00 heaven" with regular flashes of Bond's flesh.

Gay audiences are expected to flock to the film - pushing ticket receipts for the highly anticipated movie even higher.

Peter Tatchell, gay rights campaigner, said: "It was probably quite an astute move to turn James Bond into a man for all seasons."

● Casino Royale hits UK cinemas on November 17.

KEELEY'S BACK WITH BAD BOY Babe 'really happy'

by CIARAN HANNAH

PAGE Three babe Keeley Hazell is back with the boyfriend who beat up football ace Joe Cole.

The 20-year-old beauty split with bad boy Lloyd Miller after he bashed the Chelsea and England midfielder during a party at her home in January.

But his family say they're now back together after telling pals they can't be without each other.

A relative of Miller, 20, said: "He's really happy, as is Keeley."

But the model's family and close friends fear she is making a mistake by taking Miller back and that her modelling career could suffer.

The 32DD babe, voted the world's second sexiest woman by FHM magazine earlier this year, has rapidly become Britain's number one pin-up.

Lashed

She is tipped to make millions by showing off her curves in years to come.

But a family source said Miller's reputation could put paid to that and she ought to "ditch him for good".

Following the attack on Cole, which left him bruised and bloodied, Miller admitted losing his rag with the star.

He claimed the former West Ham ace had been chatting Keeley up, so he lashed out.

Cole, who turns 25 on Wednesday, gave a different version of events, saying he'd fallen asleep at the party and woke to find a "big fella" punching him.

A friend of Keeley's said: "She decided it was best to distance herself from Lloyd. She was really upset about it all and couldn't understand why he lost it like he did."

"The thing is she really liked him and hasn't been able to get him out of her head."

"They're one of those couples that may not, on paper, be good for each other but they can't stop the way they feel about each other."

Only a few weeks

HOTHEAD: Lloyd Miller

ago Keeley said that she was desperate to find a new man.

But she revealed she was struggling to find someone who could handle the attention she gets.

The babe, from Bromley in Kent, said: "How do I get men to like me for me?"

"It's hard to find a guy who can deal with my job and the attention I get from other guys."

Model

"I get chatted up a lot but when I'm out I lie about my name and say I'm Stacey."

"It would be nice to meet someone who knew me as me and not Keeley The Model."

Keeley's pal said: "Maybe it's a case of better the devil you know."

Anorexia fears for dumped Suzi

by ANDY LEA

STUNNED: Suzi Walker

PALS fear glamour babe Suzi Walker's former health problems could return now that she's been ditched by her footie star hubby Ian.

The ex-England goalkeeper left former anorexic Suzi heartbroken after falling for American dancer Samantha Thurman while on holiday in Las Vegas.

Suzi, 33 - believed to have been the model for the character Chardonnay in TV's Footballers' Wives - was willing to forgive her hubby of 13 years. But ex-Spurs stopper Ian, 35, who's now with Bolton Wanderers, dropped another bombshell.

He announced he wanted to bring the 34-year-old showgirl back to Britain to live. Suzi is now filing for divorce.

And friends say they are worried she could succumb once more to eating problems.

One pal told the Daily Star Sunday: "Suzi has been in bits."

She feels like the rug has been pulled out from under her. She looks pale and thin.

"She wanted to patch things up but Ian has seemingly just thrown 13 years of marriage away."

"Her friends are doing everything they can to help her."

Ian has moved out of the £2million mansion in Surrey he shared with Suzi and their daughter Sophie, eight.

He is renting a flat in Manchester and is said to be considering a career in the US.

500 PALS FLY TO WEDDING

SUPERSTAR Tom Cruise will splash out more than $10million on his wedding.

Some 500 guests will see him tie the knot with Katie Holmes in two weeks.

The Mission Impossible star is flying plane-loads of celebrity pals to Italy for the November 18 marriage.

And the party will begin two days before the ceremony and end next day.

Last night a source close to the couple said they have booked virtually every room in Rome's five-star Hassler Hotel.

But Cruise, 44, and his 27-year-old bride could thwart fans and paparazzi by switching the location to designer Giorgio Armani's palatial seaside estate in Portofino.

A guest told the Daily Star Sunday: "We won't be told until the last moment where the actual ceremony will take place." Armani is creating Holmes' gown and outfits for everyone in the main wedding party, including Cruise's adopted children, Isabella, 13, and Connor, 11.

Cruise and Holmes have bought eight sterling silver place settings - at $2,000 apiece - by Italian designer Buccellati for their top table.

A friend said: "They intend this to be the Hollywood wedding of the year."

Guests expected include David and Victoria Beckham, John Travolta, Brad Pitt and Angelina Jolie.

SEXY EM'S BRIT PART

AUSSIE model Emily Scott is set to become Britain's latest cyber-babe thanks to her funnyman boyfriend David Walliams.

The Love Island star has landed a role in the new computer game version of 35-year-old David's hit Little Britain comedy show.

Now Emily, 22, will squeeze into a state-of-the-art motion capture suit to have her gorgeous curves scanned for the game.

"David thought this would be an ideal opportunity for her," said a source. "Gamers will love her."

The game will be out in 2007.

Militants say 'Abu could lead us'

EXILED IN LEBANON: Omar Bakri

ISLAMIC militants want hate preacher Abu Izzadeen to replace exiled Omar Bakri Mohammed as their figurehead.

Izzadeen, who was born in London to a Jamaican family, hit the headlines as a spokesman for banned Islamic group al-Ghurabaa (The Strangers).

In September, he disrupted a meeting chaired by Home Secretary Dr John Reid.

Izzadeen, who has described the 7/7 suicide bombers as "completely praiseworthy", publicly branded Dr Reid an "enemy" of Islam.

And now the cleric, formerly known as Trevor Brooks, is being backed to take over Bakri's role as the country's leading radical.

Last month, Izzadeen led a demonstration outside the Old Bailey against the trial of men charged over protests against cartoons of the prophet Mohammed.

Anjem Choudary, Bakri's former spokesman, said Izzadeen was a key figure in the protests against the Government's treatment of Muslims.

Character

He told the Daily Star Sunday exclusively: "Abu Izzadeen is someone who has the character to understand the relationship between Muslims and non-Muslims."

The loss of Bakri - in exile in Lebanon after being booted out of the UK last year - left a power vacuum Izzadeen, 30, hopes to fill.

An extremist source told us: "Izzadeen is being groomed as a possible successor. Everyone was really impressed at the way he took on John Reid."

Last month we revealed Izzadeen kept his wife locked up in their East London home while advertising for three more wives on a website.

Fiend jailed

A BRITISH health spa boss who posed as a doctor and sexually assaulted four women on Lanzarote has been jailed for four years.

Michael Robson-Salmon, 47, abused his victims in reflexology, counselling and massage sessions "to satisfy his lustful desires", judges ruled.

The married father of two massaged the women's breasts and private parts telling them it was part of their therapy, a court in Las Palmas was told.

Desires

"The only intention the accused had in practising those massages was to satisfy his own sexual desires," said the judges.

Last night one of his victims, a 32-year-old mum from Essex, said: "I went to him with a bad back and shoulder. He ended up massaging my breasts."

Robson-Salmon denied all charges and is expected to appeal the verdict.

HERO SAYS

How the Legion

by VICTORIA LAMBERT

LANCE Corporal David Hart nearly died when he was blown up by a Taliban suicide bomber – but he now has a new life thanks to the Poppy Appeal.

The Territorial Army soldier lost seven pints of blood when his Land Rover was destroyed by a huge blast in downtown Kabul.

His parents and fiancée Helen were warned he might not survive the night.

But now the former brewery worker from Tiverton, Devon, is studying for a degree and hopes to one day help Afghanistan and other war-torn countries back to their feet.

The Royal British Legion – organisers of the annual fund-raiser – helped turn David's life around as he fought to overcome horrific injuries.

They paid off thousands of pounds in debts run up by the couple as David recovered. The help meant they could also get their marriage plans back on track.

Fanatic

The Legion's experts also gave David a two-day work assessment to help find him a new career.

David's injuries ruled him out of his old forklift driving job but tests showed he was a bright lad and with the Legion's help he took A-levels and is now at university.

The 30-year-old had been on a three-month peacekeeping tour with the Rifle Volunteers when the bomber struck in the Afghan capital two years ago.

The fanatic pulled up alongside the five lads, all from Devon and Dorset, and detonated his 250lb device.

The bomber and Land Rover driver Private Jonathan "Kit" Kitulagoda, 23, both died instantly.

And the explosion – heard two miles away – hurled David right across the road and into a nearby field.

Pals found him dazed but still conscious. His back was on fire after he was doused in burning battery acid.

David's left arm hung uselessly at his side as a severed artery spewed blood.

But within seven minutes the injured men were being whisked to a military hospital.

David said: "I remember the day starting like any other. The next thing I really knew, I was in a hospital bed in Germany three weeks later.

"When they found me apparently I was coherent but I've had to piece together what happened. I had shrapnel in my skull, one

THANKS TO

THE POPPY APPEAL

BACK FROM THE BRINK: Medics feared David, right, also pictured inset in his TA uniform, would die from his injuries in an Afghan suicide blast. Now he's rebuilding his life with help from the Royal British Legion

They need you

THE Royal British Legion was launched in 1921 to support ex-servicemen. Every year it asks people to buy a poppy, the symbol of the battlefields of the First World War, and wear it until Armistice Day on November 11. Last year the appeal raised £24.7million and this year's target is £26million.

Buying a poppy helps serving as well as former soldiers, sailors and airmen – some as young as 17 – along with the families of those who have been in the Forces. Buying a poppy also funds Poppy Support, the Legion's range of welfare services which offer careers advice, vocational assessment, debt relief and benefits advice.

You can show your support by buying a poppy or texting POPPY to 85099 to get yours as a download. For more info visit www.poppo.org.uk or call 08457 725 725. If you think you may be entitled to help, call Legionline on the above number or visit www.britishelegion.org.uk lung had collapsed and I lost seven pints of blood. I don't think I had much time left."

Army doctors in Kabul thought they could not save him. But the medical team bought him vital minutes by removing an artery from his leg and using it to replace the severed one in his arm.

They then put him into a drug-induced coma and flew him to Germany for specialist treatment.

Lucky

The medication left David convinced he was onboard a spaceship, not in a hospital bed. But while he was unaware of the perilous nature of his injuries, Helen and David's parents were going frantic at his bedside.

"They told Helen I might not last the night. But she was always determined I would recover," he said.

The worst moment for the young hero came when he was told that his pal Kit had died in the explosion.

"You get really close over there. When I heard about Kit, it was as though my feet had been taken out from under me. I was knocked for six. It made me realise too how lucky I had been – and how very close the bomb had been to killing me."

Now, after marrying Helen, also 30, in June 2004, David is still battling to recover.

"My left hand isn't fully functional, I have damaged nerves in the elbow and I get pain from the bits of shrapnel that lodged in my neck.

"But I think I am more happy-go-lucky than I was before.

"I have had flashbacks but I'm not haunted by the explosion."

Now, with help from the Legion, the Army Welfare Board and the Soldiers Sailors And Families Association Forces Help, David is rebuilding his life.

He now hopes his international relations and history degree will bring exciting new challenges.

He told us: "I've been at the sharp end – now I'd like to step back and look at the bigger picture.

"Perhaps I'll end up working for a charity, perhaps I will teach.

"This has been a step-up in my life."

DEAD Ringers funny-man JON CULSHAW has just signed up to be a special guest star on ITV's eternally successful Heartbeat. The in-demand impressionist said: "I can't wait – it's a bit hush-hush but let us just say that for once I get to play someone as near to me as possible!"

ALL SAINTS aren't as rock 'n' roll as they used to be. On the comeback trail with new single Rock Steady released tomorrow, their rider reads like a shopping list for a mum at Boots. It includes supplies of children's cough mixture, Olbas inhalers and a baby listening device.

JORDAN'S little sister SOPHIE PRICE has been offered her own show on E4. The channel want a camera team to follow her around as she bids to become as big a name as her mega-boobed sis. A source said: "She can't wait."

A GAY TURN-OFF

GEORGE MICHAEL has spurned his many gay fans by refusing to appear at the top club night GAY at London's Astoria club. A club source said: "We put requests into him regularly but we always get knocked back. Some of the biggest names in showbiz have appeared including Kylie and Madonna. We don't know what his problem is."

VINCE VAUGHN has fallen in love with British food while filming in London. A source said: "He loves bangers and mash but his current favourite is cheese toasties done in a sandwich toaster. He's addicted!"

SOON to depart EastEnders star WENDY RICHARD is keen to work again with pal LESLIE GRANTHAM. Wendy, who plays sour-faced Pauline Fowler, turned up to his book launch recently and they were as cosy as ever according to onlookers. A pal said: "She's got a lot of time for Leslie and would love to work with him on the stage."

JOHNNY VAUGHAN'S plans to conquer the US have been put on hold. The Capital Radio DJ's reality series My Kind Of Town has been cancelled after just four episodes and there are no plans for more. A source said: "He won't let it stop him. He's determined to crack the States."

LILY ALLEN is planning to dump her famous flowing dresses for a hot "vampy" new look. Lily told me: "I liked the dresses at first but now I hate the fking things, to be honest."

KYLIE is planning to team up with her mentor PETE WATERMAN for one last time. A source at his company PWL said: "She owes a lot to Pete and wanted to repay him. She's co-written a song with him and those who've heard it reckon it could be the sound of 2007's summer." Kylie is also to feature in a South Bank Show special.

Becca all rock 'n' role

SEXY actress Rebecca Atkinson is a foxy minx in TV's Shameless. As barmaid Karen the blonde beauty has regularly stripped for sizzling sex scenes.

But in real life she refuses to even move in with childhood sweetheart Tom McGarva.

Rebecca, 23, says: "My mam would be really upset if we lived together."

"We were in the same class at school and we started going together at 16. But I am a Catholic and Tom and I don't live together."

And that made doing the sex scenes in Shameless really difficult.

Salford-born Rebecca says: "When I got the part I knew she was a foxy minx but you are never prepared for the sex scenes."

"I found having to do nude scenes quite overwhelming and I got this awful sickly feeling in the belly before I did them."

"I'm quite demure and my friends think it is hysterical when they see me rolling around as Karen."

Shameless returns to Channel 4 in January.

BABE WORKS IT OUT

by MICHAEL BOOKER

DANCING babe Deanne Berry reckons you can pig out this Christmas...as long as you get hot and sweaty with her on Boxing Day.

The Aussie star, who shot to fame in the sexy video for Eric Prydz song Call On Me, stars in the new Ministry Of Sound workout video Pump It Up - Burn It, Lose It, which is out on December 26.

Deanne, 26, who says she loves food, is targeting couch potato Brits who enjoy stuffing themselves in front of the telly.

"I really enjoy food but like most people I have my naughty days, so exercise is essential to maintain a healthy body," she said.

And she told Daily Star Sunday readers: "Have a good Christmas and I'll help you have an even better New Year getting in shape!"

Lags' prison code cracked

LONGER SENTENCES:
Lags are adding letters to words

CUNNING prisoners have been using secret codes to order drugs and run criminal empires from jail.

They hoped to outwit prison officers listening in to their phone calls.

But the code has now been cracked by a warder at Lincolnshire's North

by ANDY GARDNER

Sea Camp – where Lord Archer served some of his sentence.

The warder, who has not been named, used to work for an Army decoding unit and used his skills to crack the cypher.

Details have now been sent to prisons across Britain. Officers eavesdrop or record phone calls made by lifers – including killers, sex offenders and crime gang leaders.

Secret

Staff at category D North Sea Camp were baffled by the gibberish inmates used when speaking to family and friends on the outside.

The prison warder had a hunch that the "slang" could actually be a code devised to evade security.

After writing the words down he discovered extra As and Bs were being added to words to make them sound nonsensical.

WRITE CLEVER METHOD

CLABASSAB1 – Class 1 drugs.

NABICK ME TOMABO FOR THE STABUFF – Nick me tomorrow for the stuff.

PABICK ME ABUP – Pick me up.

BABANG IN TRABOUBLE – Bang in trouble.

PRABISON PHABONE – Prison phone.

Once he had removed them, he could read the lifers' orders to outsiders, some involving the smuggling of drugs.

An insider told the Daily Star Sunday: "The code is being used by some of the most dangerous criminals who have been serving life sentences."

"It was quite sophisticated and gave them an edge."

The Prison Service is so worried about the revelation it has warned jail governors across Britain. Prisoners have been turning to increasingly ingenious means to get their hands on drugs.

Last month, the Scottish Prison service investigated claims lags in Lanarkshire's Shott Prison were getting drugs delivered to their cells in the frames of broken bicycles sent in under a charity repair scheme.

Jack'll get brattered

POP hunk Aaron Carter has challenged Jack Osbourne to a fight after branding him a "brain-dead British brat".

Ozzy's son started the feud when he slated the American's new reality show House Of Carters and dubbed Aaron, brother of Backstreet Boy Nick, an "irritating little bastard".

Gobby Jack, who turns 21 on Wednesday, had a bash at the 18-year-old singer, saying: "I would gladly kick the sh*t out of Aaron Carter."

The first episode of House Of Carters hits UK screens tonight. But Jack said: "It's nothing compared to what we did."

Yesterday Aaron and his brother, who have both dated Paris Hilton – let Jack have it with both barrels.

Aaron said: "He's welcome to try to kick the shit out of me any time he likes. I normally love Brits but this guy's brain-dead. He comes across as the biggest brat of them all on his show."

Nick, 26, who is recording new Backstreet Boys and solo albums, said: "What Jack Osbourne knows about talent would barely fit on a postage stamp."

Tears

Tonight's debut episode shows the lads' three sexy sisters – Angel, 18, Leslie, 19, and Bobbie Jean, 24 – arriving at Nick's $18million LA pad.

They try to bond after their parents Bob and Jane divorce. But the reunion ends in tears when "BJ" gets wasted on booze and declares: "I'm trailer trash."

And things get worse as they hear their mum has been rushed to hospital.

You can see the show tonight at 6pm on E!

PES 6 vs FIFA 07

Titans' footie thriller

IT was a week when the football titans went head to head.

No – not the fracas in Barcelona that had Drogba chewing grass every other challenge (though I did enjoy Mourinho celebrating on his knees in front of 100,000 Catalans).

I'm talking about Konami's Pro Evolution Soccer 6 and EA's FIFA 07 squaring off on the Xbox 360.

So who came out on top? Unsurprisingly, PES went straight in at No.1 in the chart, with FIFA in second. However, like Chelsea's mid-week clash, you could barely fit a bootlace between them.

Trying to compare two different football games should be easy but it's not. It's like comparing Sean Connery with Roger Moore – film fans usually opt for whichever Bond they grew up with. The same applies to PES and FIFA.

I have always been firmly on the side of Pro Evolution. That's because when I first moved to London, finances meant most evenings were spent with pals playing Pro Evo, our addiction fuelled by the cheap cider the local shop was knocking out at 98p a litre.

Not the most productive time of my life but I can still remember moments of front-room drama that included kicking the console against a window after a dramatic penalty shoot-out defeat.

Pro Evolution 6 has one thing in common with its predecessors – stunning gameplay. In fact, that's the sole reason PES has edged out its rival over the years, despite EA's best efforts, including throwing enough cash at it to make Abramovich look like a door-to-door dishcloth seller.

Quality

Of course, there are differences between PES 5 and 6 – the improved player A.I. means team-mates make intelligent runs off the ball and the quality of passing and shooting now depends on the position of a player's body.

Yet overall, the experience is very familiar, making PES6 an almost peerless simulation.

I say "almost" because EA, having spent the past few years tying up the rights to every league down to the Bulgarian fourth division, have finally revamped the gameplay making it, dare I say, just like Pro Evolution.

Add to this the online feature of breaking news and live scores, as well as authentic names, stadia and badges, and it really delivers – even for a PES fan.

Like Chelsea and Barcelona, PES is beautiful, FIFA functional.

But both are very good. What we are left with is two huge titles, either of which I could happily play for days on end.

Now where's the cider...

THE BIG MATCH: Adriano, left, and Rooney square up for the rival titles

1 Pro Evolution Soccer 6 (PS2, Xbox 360, DS, PSP)

2 FIFA 07 (PS2, Xbox 360, PC, DS, PSP, GBA)

PRETENCE: Merchant

A write off for Steve

THE Office co-writer Stephen Merchant has told how he had to lie to schoolchildren about his fame – because he bored them at a careers chat.

The best pal of Ricky Gervais was supposed to tell kids what it was like to have a job as a writer.

But despite having millions gripped with his gags on Extras and The Office, he ended up pretending Beyoncé was his best pal to grab their attention.

Merchant, 31, said: "I was asked if I would talk about my career to a group of children at a school in inner city Bristol.

"I was expecting to be talking to a group of sixth formers... they were nine and ten these kids.

"They didn't really know who I was and I started talking about writing but they didn't understand and started talking to each other. I lost them straight away. I was devastated.

"One of them asked if I had been a DJ and I said I had and it was great because you get to meet people like Robbie Williams and Beyoncé.

"I have never met either of them! I have no concept of how to talk to children."

School's kiss ban

SIXTH-FORMERS have been barred from holding hands, cuddling or kissing at a school.

The ban has been imposed by psychology teacher Graham Bibby who told his pupils aged 17 and 18: "You wouldn't like it if teachers did that."

Bibby, head of the sixth form at Bishop Heber High School in Malpas, Cheshire, announced the no-touching ban after telling two couples to cool their ardour in the school grounds.

A spokesman for the education authority said two boys were spoken to about their behaviour.

But school governor Anne Patten said: "Young people do form relationships. It's a normal part of growing up."

Kev gets a wrestling ring lesson

MISTER BRITNEY SPEARED

HIS new album is called Playing With Fire – and that's exactly what Britney Spears' fella Kevin Federline is doing here!

The self-styled "K-Fed" is about to get his head slammed into the canvas by pro wrestler John Cena.

And Britney, right, was at the ringside looking horrified at the "spearing".

Federline, 28, was originally due to make just a one-off appearance with the grapplers to promote his record when World Wrestling Entertainment were in Los Angeles for their flagship show Raw.

But his performance was so good that bone-bending chiefs asked him back – with fans begging for him to be hired full-time.

They are so keen to see him beaten up that insiders reckon he is a natural "heel" – wrestle-speak for a bad guy.

It may be a much-needed new

Two concerts on his publicity tour were cancelled due to poor his own music and his own entrance video, everybody was booing him and he buried the crowd. I thought, 'They have got to hire this man'.

"This was great. I'm enjoying this feud more than anything else in wrestling these days."

In his first appearance K-Fed told booing fans: "Same people who are booing me now buy my picture when it's on the cover of magazines. Y'all want to hear my rap? Well, you're going to have to wait until my record drops."

Move

He was corner man to wrestler Johnny Nitro when WWE champion Cena confronted him, giving Britney's man a spearing.

Wrestling insiders say Federline, who got £8,000 for each appearance, wants to work with the group again.

Meanwhile he has faced down reports that his marriage to Britney 24, is on the rocks.

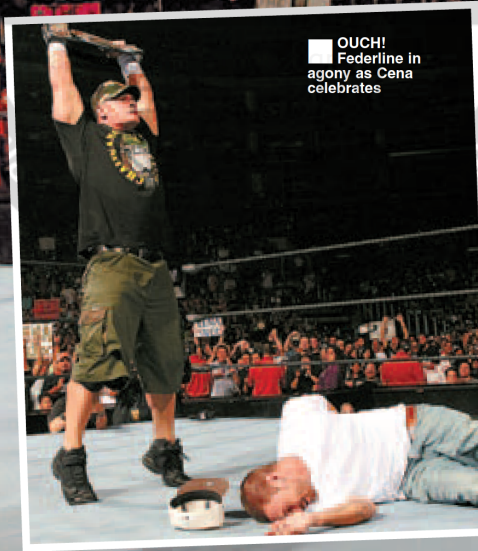

He said last week he wanted to move to a farm with Brit and their sons, one-year-old Sean Preston and seven-week-old Jayden James.

ticket sales and a New York gig was also under threat.

Wrestling writer Bryan Alvarez said of Federline: "This was awesome. When K-Fed came out at the beginning of the show with

Café fiddler on the hoof

BAD girl Becky Granger comes back to cause more chaos – with Tyrone Dobbs her first victim.

Within minutes of returning, the ex-jailbird, played by Katherine Kelly, sweet-talks her way into a job with gullible café boss Hayley Cropper.

But her stroke of luck proves bad news for her first customer Tyrone (Alan Halsall) when she accuses him of trying to fiddle her.

Lying

And as big-hearted Hayley (Julie Hesmondhalgh) has forgotten to let hubby Roy (David Neilson) know she has taken on a new member of staff, things are really set to hot up.

A Coronation Street insider said: "Hayley has been working with ex-cons and forms a relationship with Becky. It doesn't take her long to convince Hayley she's changed. "But when Roy finds out about the new appointment he's not happy. "Eventually he gives in and lets her stay – a decision he ends up regretting within seconds. "First she drops some plates, then when Tyrone pops in for his sarnies all hell breaks loose as he politely tells her he's been short-changed.

"She lets rip at him and even accuses him of lying. "Poor Roy has to step in to calm things down and it soon turns into quite an eventful day."

FALL THAT JAS

Bar wars claim teenage drunk

JASMINE Thomas is cuffed - after getting caught in the crossfire between the Woolpack and the B&B.

The teenager (actress Jenna-Louise Coleman) is in for a shock when police drag her out of the boozier for being drunk and disorderly.

The drama is all down to scheming B&B boss Louise Appleton, played by Emily Symons. She calls in the coppers to get her bitter business rival Val Lambert into bother for serving kids.

The move couldn't come at a worse time for the landlady (actress Charlie Hardwick) as she is finalising a dodgy wine deal with Jamie Hope (Alex Carter) just as the police pounce.

Trouble

An insider revealed: "Since Louise took over the B&B and started trying to get the Woolpack's punters in the evenings it has been all-out war between the pair. So when Louise spots Jasmine being served she jumps at the chance to get Val in lots of trouble for serving someone who's underage and calls in the police.

Arrest

"Poor Jasmine is bladdered by the time they turn up - which is bad news for Val who had been doing well in her battle against the B&B.

"But having the police arrest two of your customers isn't exactly good for business.

"Still, she can't hide her relief that the police were so focused on nicking Jasmine they totally failed to notice she was in the middle of a dodgy deal when they burst in.

"And with the gossip around the village reaching new heights it won't be long before Val discovers who was behind the tip-off."

"Emmerdale fans had better prepare for fireworks when Val realises what Louise has done to her."

Viewers of the hit ITV1 soap will be able to watch all the drama as Louise steps up the vendetta against her Woolpack rival a week tomorrow.

BARK CONTROL COLLAR

HUMANE TRAINING TO STOP NEEDLESS BARKING

no pain, shock or trauma - only £17.95 + p&p

Train your dog and calm his barking in as little as 3 weeks.

The Bark Control Collar uses a humane and painless tone to teach your dog to break the barking habit without pain, shock or needless trauma. The collar is activated whenever the dog barks. Use along side your dog's regular collar, your dog will learn to associate the high frequency whistle with barking and the habit will be broken. Training time varies from dog to dog, but typical training time is 3 to 4 weeks. Requires 1 x 9v battery (not supplied).

Only £17.95 + P&P

☐ SO we are supposed to trust Tony Blair about the environment?

This is the bloke who told us Saddam was about to launch chemical weapons so he could spend billions of taxpayers' money waging an illegal war with George Bush.

And how are we to know the money from all these extra taxes isn't going to go the same way?

☐ CALL me a moaner but if Madonna and Guy really cared about Malawian kids, why don't they go and work in an orphanage out there? That would give a lot more practical help to a lot more children, instead of just giving a life of privilege to one cute baby.

And an added bonus - it means that cinema goers would be spared another daft gangster flick from him!

A LITTLE paper bag was feeling unwell, so he went to the doctors.

"Doctor, I don't feel too good," said the little paper bag.

"Hmm, you look OK to me," said the doctor, "but I'll do a blood test and see what that shows. Come back and see me in a couple of days."

The little paper bag felt no better when he got back for the results.

"I'm afraid you are HIV positive!" said the doctor.

"No, I can't be - I'm just a little paper bag!"

"Have you been having unprotected sex or sharing needles with other drug users?" asked the doctor.

"NO! I can't do things like that - I'm just a little paper bag!"

"Perhaps you've been abroad recently and required a jab or a blood transfusion?" queried the doctor.

"NO! I don't have a passport - I'm just a little paper bag!"

"Well", said the doctor, "are you in a homosexual relationship?"

"NO! I told you I can't do things like that, I'm just a little paper bag!"

"Then there can be only one explanation," said the doctor.

"Your mother must have been a carrier."

MY GRIEF

Sharon's dolphin hubby anguish

WITH THIS HER-RING: Sharon weds Cindy, the love of her life

BRIT Sharon Tendler is mourning her husband...Cindy the dolphin.

by REBECCA VARLEY

Sharon married Cindy, who lived at the Eilat Reef in Israel, last December.

But now the bottlenose dolphin has died and been buried at sea. And Sharon, 41, who lives with her mum in Ilford, Essex, has ruled out finding a new fishy lover.

She says: "I'm a one dolphin woman. In time I will return. The staff have kept his bucket for me." Clothes importer Sharon met Cindy 15 years ago and visited him twice a year. When they wed Sharon kneeled and gave Cindy a kiss and a herring.

She was then thrown into the water to swim with her new hubby.

"People think I'm a nutcase but everyone has their obsessions," says Sharon.

"Mine are dolphins and rock music."

"I used to sing Iris by the Goo Goo Dolls to him. He loved it. This dolphin is the love of my life."

SAD: Sharon last week

MEET HOLLYOAKS' GEORGINA, THE NEW.

James Bond Blonde

■ WE bet James Bond would have a hard time turning down this blonde beauty if he bumped into her at the Casino Royale.

Hollyoaks honey Georgina Walker could definitely give the 007 spy a run for his money at the tables as, thanks to an online casino website, she's red hot at poker.

■ The 22-year-old babe has won an army of fans playing saucy model Polly in the Channel 4 soap spin-off In The City.

But she says she'd love the chance to star alongside Bond hunk Daniel Craig for her next role.

She revealed: "I went to a casino in Cannes for my 21st birthday and

by EMMA SHANKLAND

had an amazing time. It was so glamorous.

■ "It gave me the betting bug and now I love the website 888.com and watching poker on TV.

"Some people may think that makes me boring but I think there's something really sexy about it.

"I'd love to have joined Bond in Casino Royale.

■ "My favourite 007 is Sean Connery but I think Daniel Craig is going to come pretty close.

"He's an amazing actor and he certainly looks the part."

Georgina is now pinning her hopes on appearing in the next Bond movie – and she's promised a treat to cinema goers if she does.

■ She said: "I was really shy about stripping off when I first joined In The City but I'm a lot easier about it now.

"If I did end up in a Bond movie I'd certainly get my clothes off for a sex scene.

"I'd have no problems stripping down to my undies."
